

EDITORIAL

In 2015, the Goiano Bulletin of Geography took a significant step forward with the progressive internationalization policy to publish bilingual articles. Four out of ten papers published in this latest issue are available both in English and Portuguese. This number comprises an array of contributions ranging from maritime summer vacation and urbanization, to tourism, environmental impacts of oil production, as well as issues related to climatology. Once again, the origins of the authors reflect the large circulation and the scientific community's confidence in our publication.

Furthermore, it is necessary to thank the professionals from Cegraf's Department of Scientific Journals at UFG, who have carried out the standardization, the editing and proofreading, the translation, as well as the typesetting of this issue. We are deeply grateful for their patience in promptly meeting our demands.

Enjoy the reading!
